CIRCUMPOLAR ETHNOGRAPHIC FIELD SCHOOL

- 2012 Russian Field School organized with 12 students traveling to the Komi Republic from the end of May to early July 2012.
- 2005 CEFS organized in the summer with another 12 students traveling with me to the Komi Republic.
- 2004 Following the success of the 2003 field school, another Circumpolar Ethnographic Field School was organized in the Komi Republic. I traveled with 12 students following the same model of field school organized the previous summer.
- 2003 In the summer session, I organized a 3-month field school in the Komi Republic. I brought 8 students to the Komi Republic (Russia) where they conducted community based research and were trained in field research methods. We also traveled to the northern tundra to visit a number of reindeer herding communities as to better understand life in the Russian north.
- 2001 In the summer of 2001, I organized the first Circumpolar Ethnographic Field School. This was an original project that sought to train students in ethnographic field methods. The first season of the Circumpolar Ethnographic Field School was spent in the Sakha Republic (Russia).
